

Company profile

3DMEDiTech uses technology to make people healthier

3DMEDiTech has established a state-of-the-art 3D printing facility in Port Melbourne that will revolutionise the provision of healthcare across the Asia Pacific. Our additive manufacturing technologies will improve patient outcomes, dramatically reduce patient waiting periods for customised devices, as well as maximise supply chain efficiencies for hospitals and clinics.

To improve medical outcomes, 3DMEDiTech have developed 3D printing technologies, know-how, and engineering to produce lighter, stronger, customised devices. It is by combining these unique capabilities with the expertise of our leading clinical partners, 3D engineering specialists, software engineers and process engineers, that 3DMEDiTech is able to offer a full end-to-end manufacturing solutions approach.

SmileStyler replaces braces with an Australian made clear aligner solution coupled with fast and accurate scanning technology. We believe SmileStyler produces the world's best clear aligner.

SERKEL produces innovative helmets for babies with plagiocephaly (a misshapen or uneven head) and ankle foot orthotics (AFOs) for children with cerebral palsy. The potential market for SERKEL products is very large and customers are currently poorly serviced. For example, 10% of new born babies would benefit from wearing a customised SERKEL 3D printed helmet.

Speaker Profile

Paul Docherty

Paul Docherty, Founder of 3DMEDiTech and Chairman of Melbourne Rebels Rugby Club, is a well-regarded Melbourne businessman and entrepreneur. Docherty co-founded 3D medical printing company 3DMEDiTech, revolutionising the healthcare industry in Australia, in 2016. Former CEO and Founder of Direct Connect, one of Australia's largest moving services Company, which was sold to Snowy Hydro in 2014, Docherty is a serial entrepreneur.

Docherty attended Harvard's renowned AMP Business Course in Boston in late 2015 and remains heavily involved in YPO, a global network of senior CEO's and business owners, where he recently served as the Melbourne Yarra Chairman.

