Richard Lipscombe is Founding and Managing Director of PILL, which specialises in biomarker discovery and provides contract analytical services globally.

Richard is a protein chemist by training. He completed his chemistry degree at Oxford University and a Doctorate in Immunology at London University. Richard moved to Perth in 1995 and managed the Protein Analysis Facility at the University of Western Australia, before stepping out of academia to co-found Proteomics International in 2001.

Richard led the company through its ASX listing in April 2015 and now leads PILL's corporate development and the commercialisation of its ground-breaking technologies.
